THE GOODNESS OF MAGGI® NOODLES

How are MAGGI Noodles made?

Our MAGGI® noodles are made in the same way that you would make noodles in your kitchen, except on a larger scale.

First, we get freshly milled wheat from Australia which is kneaded into dough and rolled into sheets before being cut into noodle strands. The noodles are then steamed, fried, cooled and dried to maintain freshness. Our curry tastemaker is made from real chilies and 12 'Grade A' spices which are then slow-cooked for the great taste and aroma

- The Right Blend
Our in house chefs have carefully crafted a range of timeless MAGGI recipes to delight generations of consumers. For example, our signature Kari uses a blend of 12 spices selected with great care from around the world to deliver maximum taste and goodness.
- One great tasting noodle, 2 types of wheat
A blend of Australian Hard Wheat and Australian Premium White Wheat is used to make noodles with just the right texture and springiness. These high-quality wheats are packed with goodness and proteins.
- Maintaining the Goodness
Our noodles are kept fresh throughout the manufacturing process. Removing moisture stops spoilage and helps our noodles stay rich in nutrients.
- Beyond Certification
With MAGGI®, you can always be sure it is halal and beyond. We believe in halal as a lifestyle philosophy and the backbone of our entire manufacturing process.

On-The-Go
